A Look Toward 2014

I believe I am like most people toward the end of the year. December always brings the joy of the Christmas season, but also a great deal of self-reflection on the past year. This reflection has led me to a New Year Resolution – to follow Benjamin Franklin's Thirteen Virtues. It is my intent to improve myself a little each day.

In order to see this resolution out of the month of January, I am covering the process in my blog each month and logging my daily attempts on an app. Misery always loves company so I welcome anyone who would like to join me.

Until the New Year, I wish each of you a happy and joyous holiday season and a safe and peaceful 2014.
