THE Z!MMERMAN AGENCY

SITUATION ANALYSIS

- Optimism about COVID-19 in the U.S. has plummeted.
  - American travelers' expectation that the coronavirus situation will get worse has increased over the last few months. Surpassing expectations that the situation will get better for the first time since the week of February 1st.
    This worsening expectation has impacted Americans' excitement to travel right now, personal health concerns, and their confidence in the ability to travel safely right now.
- Negative associations with travel are on the rise again.
  - When asked to give ONE WORD that best describes how they feel about travel right now, Americans' top response was "exciting" in July. Now, they mostly feel "good" about travel; however, the number of people citing "unsafe," "nervous," "worried," or "anxious" is growing.
- Regression in safety perceptions has caused Americans to feel we've lost ground on the progress made towards a return to normalcy.
  - Due to recent media coverage of the COVID-19 situation, 44.8% of Americans are now doubting that it is safe to go out and about and 45.0% doubt that it is safe to travel now. These decreased feelings of safety have led to a drop in perceptions of normalcy.

SITUATION ANALYSIS

- The Delta variant is disrupting Americans' travel plans.
  - Recent news about increasing Delta variant cases have made half of American travelers less interested in traveling right now. In fact, a quarter have postponed an upcoming trip and 18.9% have cancelled a trip specifically due to the Delta variant.
- On a brighter note, big cities and metropolitan areas continue to make gains in recovery.
  - Among those who took an overnight trip in the past month, cities/metro areas were the top destination type visited (39.3%), followed by small towns (30.9%) and beach destinations (26.9%). Due to recent COVID outbreaks, some cities have reinstated indoor mask requirements and while 15.7% of American travelers are opposed, 68.2% support this requirement.
- Moving forward.
  - The additional ARPA funding that has been granted to use can upswing positivity and forward planning while we strive to work towards the increasing tourist travel and events that are on the horizon for the coming year. This funding also allows us to be prepared and pivot where necessary with the current climate.

ARTICLE XIV - PROGRAMS & ACTIVITIES

Pursuant to Resolution R02-02, the Council shall distinguish its activities into four distinct program areas: Research/Administration, Advertising & Public Relations, Marketing & Convention Services, and Special Events & Grants.

- Section 1. Administration/Research. This program area provides oversight of administrative operating procedures of all activities and programs including financial and budgeting activities. The research component is a vital component and plays a significant and distinct role in the local tourism industry. Through research, the economic impact of visitors in the Tallahassee-Leon County area is determined and provides essential information such as who are Leon County's visitors, where do they originate, and what kinds of activities do they enjoy while visiting the Tallahassee-Leon County area. The research also gives the Council the edge on determining what overall economic impact visitors have on the community by studying spending habits, jobs generated, and wages earned through tourism dollars.
- Section 2. Advertising & Public Relations. Advertising efforts include development of market-specific media placements, direct mail campaigns, and production of collateral materials to support tourism sales and servicing efforts. The public relations program focuses on generating regional, national, and international publicity which spotlights Tallahassee as a visitor destination. Public relations efforts include aggressive media development, radio merchandising, and special event promotion support.
- Section 3. Marketing & Convention Services. Marketing and convention services are efforts by which the Tallahassee area is marketed as a visitor destination. This service includes "selling" Tallahassee as the site for meetings and conventions, sporting events, and tours. Visitor services include toll-free information assistance, brochures distribution, and hospitality training. Additional services include free group travel planning assistance including itinerary development, spouse/youth programs and securing favorable group rates with area hotels, restaurants and attractions.
- Section 4. Special Events & Grants. The grants program is designed to work with local organizations in coordinating special events which have potential to increase the number and/or length of stay of visitors to Tallahassee-Leon County. Grant funds are intended to supplement the promotional/marketing budget of the sponsoring organization, not the operation and/or administration of the event.

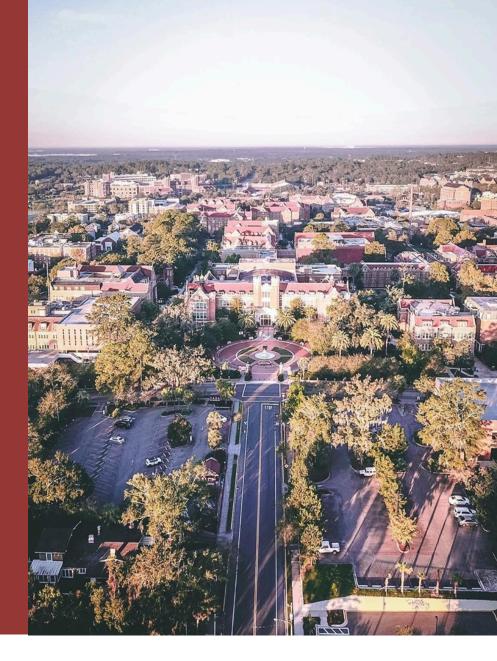

We, hereby certify that the foregoing By-Laws were duly adopted by the Tourist Development Council at its regular meeting on the 12th of November, 2002 and ratified by the Board of County Commission on June 10, 2003.
